

Please join us for a webinar by Cool Up in cooperation with LCEC and NOU Lebanon

F-Gas Regulation on the EU and Lebanon Examples: from policy measures to market effects

Lebanon is about to freeze its HFC consumption and, therefore, the government actively supports initiatives focused on enhancing the energy efficiency of cooling equipment and ensures to design effective national strategies towards sustainable cooling. The markets in the MENA region, and Lebanon in particular, are linked closely to the European Union (EU) and thus typically implement similar environmental and safety regulations for effective trade. Following the recent enforcement of revised EU F-gas Regulation and taking the best practice of the EU compliance standards, Lebanon is also developing similar regulations.

Together with the Lebanese Centre for Energy Conservation and the NOU, the Cool Up will highlight how the Kigali Amendment implementation affects local industry players under the HFC consumption freeze, including relevant political interventions of the HFC phase-down and further F-gas regulations. The webinar provides insights and implications for the cooling market related to the new EU F-gas Regulation, Lebanon's regulations and their correlation in the regulatory landscape. A dedicated part showcases the latest developments in cooling technology and market trends.

Agenda

Introduction | Mohammad Hijazi, LCEC / Lara Haidar, NOU

Highlights of the Kigali Amendment | Maria Pushkareva, Öko-Recherche

F-gas Regulation: key aspects | Barbara Gschrey, Öko-Recherche

Challenges Faced by the Lebanese RAC Industry and Solutions for Support | Bechara Assouad, Technical Director, Tecmo S.A.L.

Latest technology and market trends for cooling solutions | Dr. Felix Hydel, Öko-Recherche

Questions & Answers

Moderator: Maria Pushkareva

Time and Date

20 August 2024

13:00 -14:00 (Beirut Time)

For more information, please contact us at info@coolupprogramme.org or visit our website www.coolupprogramme.org. Please feel free to share this invitation. We look forward to seeing you at the event!

